Paper 1

May/June 2005

2 hours 30 minutes

Additional Materials: Answer Booklet/Paper

READ THESE INSTRUCTIONS FIRST

If you have been given an Answer Booklet, follow the instructions on the front cover of the Booklet. Write your Centre number, candidate number and name on all the work you hand in.

Write in dark blue or black pen on both sides of the paper.

You may use a soft pencil for any diagrams, graphs or rough working.

Do not use staples, paper clips, highlighters, glue or correction fluid.

Answer Question 1 and three questions from Sections B to D.

At the end of the examination, fasten all your work securely together.

The number of marks is given in brackets [] at the end of each question or part question.

Section A: Research Methods

1 The survey is usually a large-scale method of research that involves collecting information from large numbers of people. While this information is typically gathered from questionnaires or interviews, a survey is not limited to any one technique of collecting information. In contrast to qualitative research, which provides a more in-depth study of social life, surveys tend to produce information that is less detailed but which can be used for making statistical generalisations over broad areas. Consistency is one of the strength of surveys, as the data collected can be easily coded and analysed and should not vary according to the person(s) collecting it.

Surveys involving the collection of information at one point in time are referred to as cross-sectional surveys; they provide a snapshot picture. Longitudinal surveys are used to study the behaviour of people over time and are therefore well suited to the analysis of change. In large-scale surveys, a sample is used whereby a group of people are selected as representative of a larger population.
